

Using an ordinary hacksaw, Daniel carefully removed the finned section do something. With help from Daniel, they set out to save Channing's life. themselves. But like Jared and the helicopter crew, they were determined to by what they were looking at – scared for Channing Moss and scared for The surgeons, John Oh and Kevin Kirk, were understandably scared to get out immediately.

the old goat shed he advised everyone who wasn't needed for the operation knew he was well placed to help the two doctors though, and after reaching during his time in the army and couldn't believe Channing was still alive. He understand why the RPG hadn't gone off. He'd seen plenty of these weapons Making his way to the hospital as fast as he could, Daniel couldn't in real life.

fictional but now, unbelievably, something almost identical was happening who arrived at a hospital with a grenade inside him. That story had been Daniel Brown had just been watching a television programme about a patient that there was a bomb-disposal expert at Orgun-E. Incredibly, Staff Sergeant Luckily for Channing, it turned out brought into their hospital either. wounded private shouldn't have been been allowed on to the helicopter, the knew the rules: just as he shouldn't have of them had seen an RPG before but they and a large bulge on the other, which was the explosive warhead. Neither bandages and could see the RPG's fins sticking out of one side of his body pressure was falling fast. Two army surgeons quickly peeled away the Channing's heart rate was by now dangerously high and his blood fins sticking out and could see the RPG

peeled away the bandages

Two army surgeons quickly